“Faith, Family & Secularization”

featuring

MARY EBERSTADT
Senior Fellow @ the Ethics & Public Policy Center

MARY EBERSTADT is one of our nation’s leading cultural critics and religion scholars. Described as “intimidatingly intelligent” (by George Will) and “our premier analyst of American cultural foibles and follies” (by George Weigel), she is the author of Home-Alone America (2004), The Loser Letters (2010), Adam & Eve After the Pill (2012), and How the West Really Lost God (2013). She is a frequent media guest, and has written widely for magazines and newspapers, among them The Wall Street Journal, The Washington Post, The Los Angeles Times, National Review, The Weekly Standard, First Things, Commentary, and Policy Review. Previously, she was a fellow at Stanford University’s Hoover Institution, executive editor of the National Interest, and managing editor of the Public Interest. Between 1985 and 1987, she was a member of the Policy Planning Staff at the U.S. State Department and a speechwriter for then Secretary of State George P. Shultz. In 1984-85 she was a special assistant to U.N. Ambassador Jeane J. Kirkpatrick.
