Just in time for the World Series, Fr. Thomas Dailey will focus on the “sacrificial” dimension of our nation’s pastime. The charm baseball holds in our social consciousness is neither accidental nor circumstantial. Baseball exhibits a distinctly religious power. In light of the essential sacrificial nature of our Catholic faith, Fr. Daily will suggest that the force of this religious power is something that can restore the character of our American culture.

Fr. Daily holds a doctoral degree in sacred theology from the Pontifical Gregorian University (Rome) and is currently a theology professor at DeSales University. In 2000 he founded the Salesian Center for Faith and Culture; in 2003 he collaborated in the establishment of the Baranzano Society on bioethics. He also manages the Forum for Ethics in the Workplace and the Lehigh Valley Coalition on Sports Ethics.
